FIFTY-FIFTH YEAR NO. 2.

CEDARVILLE, OHIO, FRIDAY DECEMBER 16, 1932.

PRICE, $1.50 A YEAR

NEWS LETTER FROM STATE DEPARTMENTS

COLUMBUS—In 1930 the United States Bureau of the Census showed the population of Ohio to be 6,647,697, and the average of the last three decades indicates that Ohio's population is increasing at the rate of 1.69 per cent per year. Using this factor the population of this state would appear to be 6,873,197 persons. Of this number about 159,757 are aliens, which gives Ohio 97.7 per cent of citizens. Records in Secretary of State, Clarence J. Brown's statistical division show that 2,644,079 persons voted in the late November election, and as a result 67 per cent of the population have passed their twenty-first birthday; it appears that nearly 69 per cent of those eligible to vote actually did so.

The Ninetieth General Assembly of Ohio will convene in the Capital City two weeks from next Monday, January 2nd. There will be 32 senators in the Upper House, 16 Democrats and 16 Republicans. A total of 11,190 claims for fatal and non-fatal injuries and occupational diseases was filed with the Industrial Commission in the month of October, 350 less than the previous month and 4,182 less than in October, 1931. There were 96 fatalities, 28 more than the month before and 29 more than in October 1931. These occurred in 44 counties. Eight counties reported clear records for the first ten months of the year. There were 893 accidents with 18 fatalities due to motor vehicles.

State Director of Highways, O. W. Merrell, announces a tentative list of projects for letting on Friday, December 23rd, totaling 22,560 miles, the engineer's estimate for same being $1,001,640.66 and all of which are emergency federal aid projects. Included are 3,374 miles of concrete on the Dayton-Springfield highway estimated at $202,492.11, and 5,730 miles on the Fostoria-Millbury road in Seneca and Wood counties, the estimate for which is $142,810.52. Much of the road and bridge work will be done during the winter months, the weather being permissible.

Ohio State Grange Meet In Springfield

The Ohio State Grange has been in session in Springfield this week and problems relating to the farm and the organization were under discussion. Harry A. Caton, national secretary of the Grange, was one of the leading speakers, substituting for L. J. Taber, national master, who was detained in Washington. The depression, Caton said, has brought business, finance and industry, a greater realization "that there can be no general prosperity until there is a return of prosperity of agriculture." He said the fundamental causes of poor business as they affect farmers, are "the general aftermath of the World War, faulty distribution caused

Snow and Ice Blanket This Section of State

This section was blanketed Sunday and Monday with a coat of ice and snow that made traveling by motor or walking a hazard. Scores of automobiles were ditched Sunday night by the ice and Monday roads were all but blocked to traffic.

The State Highway Department endeavored to keep the main roads open Monday but it was a difficult task. The sharp curves and hills were sanded which removed some danger. The snowfall was estimated at about 3 inches, the heaviest in two years. The mercury by Wednesday morning had dropped to zero.

The condition of the roads caused a two day vacation for schools as it was not safe for the school buses to make the trip. Other schools closed were Clifton, Ross Twp., Jefferson Twp., Spring Valley and Caesar Creek Twp. School was resumed Wednesday morning. Many of the college students that drive from their homes in neighboring towns had difficulty in reaching the college Monday morning. So far as known no serious accidents have happened here, though many persons had their experience in falls. A number of tourists were compelled to remain here Sunday night rather than continue their journey at the risk of going into the ditch.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. BLAIR

Whereas it has pleased God in His Providence to remove from the mortal coil, one of its most faithful members, Mrs. Elizabeth Blair, we wish to offer this tribute to her memory.

She was faithful to her church in attendance until prevented by illness, all of its departments, was regular in and never lost interest in the Lord's work. Mrs. Blair was a lover of hospitality; and though of a gentle retiring disposition, she made and kept many friends. She lived her belief and her influence over others was great. She was kind, sympathetic, and generous, often denying herself, that she might give to others. Mrs. Blair's kind acts and deeds were without number, and all who knew her can truly say that hers was a godly life.

We acknowledge the goodness of God in permitting her to live among us for so many years. We bow to God's will in bringing to a close this beautiful life; and we commend the sister and brother and nephews to Him who has promised never to leave nor forsake those who trust in Him. After enjoying the dinner, the remainder of the evening was spent in games, contests, readings and singing. The male quartette, composed of Mr. R. G. George, Dr. M. I. Marsh, Rev. D. R. Guthrie and Prof. Hostetter, sang "Yankee Doodle" backwards which caused much amusement.

Miss Jennie Bratton dressed to represent a marionette, and assisted by Mrs. McChesney, gave four readings which received much well deserved applause.

BUY AMERICAN

(An Editorial in The Saturday Evening Post)

England, France and Germany have their internal troubles and dissensions, but when there is an external threat against trade or their prestige, Englishmen line up shoulder to shoulder for England, Frenchmen for France, Germans for Germany. This is as it should be, for it is the plain duty of every man to consider his own fireside and his own country first. European countries are national to the core where their own affairs are concerned, and are internationalists solely for a national advantage. Only a mind of sugarplum sweetness could arrive at a different conclusion on surveying the European scene.

When, however, it comes to considering the big stake that lies across the water, Europe is internationally-minded and speaks with one voice, varying only in degree and the depth of the chest tones. Not their own tariffs and discriminations but our American ones are responsible for their trade troubles, our cussedness, not their own, hates and jealousies, are keeping them stirred up; the war debts, plus our private loans to Germany, and not their armaments, are draining their hearts' blood.

Germany, rid of reparations, is now beginning to double up with pain at the thought of paying her private debts, though she is seeking the right, which she would undoubtedly exercise, to arm to the teeth. France, engaged with gold and making political loans all over Europe, is beginning to hint in her press at repudiation of our so-called war loans to her. England, hoping for the best from the Gentlemen's Agreement, is planting high and higher on its trade barriers a banner with the strange device, "Buy British."

She is not alone in this, for practically every statesman in Europe is sitting at the receipt of customs, trying to take in American dollars with one hand and to take away American export trade with the other, meanwhile crying to high heaven that we are ruining Europe by refusing to lower our tariffs to a point where they can take over our home market too. Yet these nations who with one voice cry aloud against the selfishness of America are conducting intensive drives at home to make their citizens buy only goods that are made in the Empire or the Republic, as the case may be. In England the cheeses are wheeled to the diner's tables bearing little flags showing the country of their origin. And woe to the unpatriotic Briton who sneaks a cut of camembert to his plate instead of the sturdier stilton with its unimpeachable, if slightly smelly ancestry. If this had happened in America the British press and some of our own congenial knockers of America would have hailed it as another example of American infantism.

The people of the United States are not a unit in opposing the drives on their trade, their markets and the just debts owed to them. We have with us tonight the front-page publicists, or more accurately, publicity seekers, who give away a slice of the United States whenever they are invited to speak before a British audience. We have some others who, for a fancied trade advantage in Europe, would let the devil take the hindmost of our industries. We have a social element who would wipe out their war debts in exchange for an invitation to dine with a duchess or to week-end with a lord. And then there are our sugar-plum internationalists who believe that all God's children got wings except their fellow Americans.

They are right about us, but they are wrong about the rest of the world. All God's children have a dash of the spiritual in their materialism and at times rise above the earth. The last time we tried it in a big international way was during the World War, and our wings were dragged in the mud at the Versailles Conference. Undoubtedly, Europe would again hail us as an idealist and spiritual nation if we turned one cheek to cancellation of the war debts and the other to cancellation of the private debts. Only as a Gandhi among the nations, stripped down to a loin cloth, could we please our critics and meet the spiritual tests that they have set for us. The vulgarity, the materialistic significance of the dollar disappear when it is changed into pounds, francs and marks. Only then do its spiritual values appear.

On the other hand, if America would wake up, present a united front to the attacks on her, we could quickly bring about a change in the European attitude. Friendship between nations must be based on respect, and it is impossible to respect a country that permits itself to be propagandized into a weak surrender of its rights. When we all begin to think American, this this whining propaganda will stop. When we all begin to buy American, this depression will be on the run. Export trade is good if we can get it on the right basis, but not on the old terms where we loaned our customers the money to buy our goods and then held the bag, or on any terms under which Europe maintains her high tariffs and low quotas for us. In our forty-eight states we have the world's biggest and best market. More importing and exporting between these states is indicated. Intensive cultivation of this fertile ground will yield returns that we can never get from stonier fields in foreign lands.

We support the liners of England, France, Italy and Germany. But today we have the beginnings of a fine American transatlantic line, and with real encouragement from American travelers—the same kind of encouragement that the nationals of other countries give to their ships—we could soon have a fleet of the finest and fastest steamships in the world. When the British travel, they go British, the Germans go German, the Italians go Italian, and on the rare occasions when they do travel, the French go French. But it is the Americans who do the real traveling and support all these trans-Atlantic liners. When a European comes over here, it is usually with a crowbar to pry something loose.

In summer, our tourists flood Europe, buy from the shopkeepers of England and the Continent, are dressed in Paris and pile up a huge dollar balance abroad. In winter they are in Africa and on the Riviera, spending in luxury hotels and shops, cruising about the Mediterranean around the world in foreign steamers.

They flock to Bermuda, Havana and the West Indies in British and French liners, though American boats give a fine service to all these resorts and to Panama, Hawaii and the Far East. Summer and winter, the finest climates in the world, magnificent scenery and splendid train and hotel service can be found within the borders of the United States. We should not only think American, buy American, but travel American, so long as it is all take and no give internationally. More important than all, if we buy American and disregard the foreign trash that glut our market during the holidays, we can give a merry Christmas to our unemployed. A consistent policy by our citizens of buying American products and manufactured goods, and giving made-in-America Christmas presents will start up idle factories and fill up slack ones.

This idea will no doubt pain the frontpage publicists, the sugar-plum internationalists and those who would saddle the final costs of the war on America in the hope of retrieving their frozen dollars or gaining some special advantage for themselves. But every advantage of that sort will be gained at the expense of the American people as a whole. Talk about compensating advantages for eleven billion dollars is silly. There are no such advantages in sight. There is a sharp hook for America behind that bait.

America must tighten her lines, not by way of reprisal but for self-protection. Europe has made the game; two can play at it. Think American, Buy American.

England met her debt payment in gold this week while France and several small countries default. They accepted the American proposal of the moratorium. Most of our economic ills have come out of Washington and from Wall Street. We have never yet told France to pay, their telling us they won't.

When it comes to selling land at a low price we ran across the following report from a Clinton county paper a few days ago. The Federal Land Bank of Louisville bid in the Joe De Fosse farm of 196.66 acres in Vernon Twp., at sheriff's sale at $12 an acre. The land had been appraised at $18 an acre.

William J. Funk, dictionary editor and publisher, has listed what he considers the ten most beautiful words in the English language—"beautiful" in meaning and in musical arrangement of letters," as he puts it. Having compiled a list of thousands of words, he determined on the following: Dawn, Hush, Lullaby, Murmuring, Tranquil, Mist, Luminous, Chimes, Golden and Melody. "The long vowel sounds and soft consonants make these words flow smoothly," Funk said. Beauty of meaning is not enough. "Mother" is one of our most loved words, but it lacks euphony."

This is the season of the year when occasionally we read where some one gets alarmed over the destruction of a part of native woodland to supply the much desired Christmas tree for both indoor and outdoor decoration. Some think it is not only a destruction to what nature is doing but that the cost is a waste of money. To a certain extent this may be so but we have hundreds of things that might be regarded necessary and yet could be dispensed with to save a few dollars. Not all of the Christmas trees to be found come from the wild state. There are thousands of acres of land not the best for grain crops that are planted in evergreens growing for not only the Christmas tree market but for landscaping as well. Both state and federal departments have urged this course. It has given landowners an income and this income would not be possible likely were it not for the market to be found at Christmas time.

How many Ohioans know that the much desired Mistletoe can be found in a few counties in this state? While it is a native of southern states it has been found in Adams, Brown, Ross, Jackson, Lawrence, Meigs and Athens counties. The white, glutinous berries of mistletoe are carried from tree to tree by clinging to the feet of birds and squirrels, and is spread in this manner.

A Senate Committee is investigating the purchase of automobiles by different department heads at the expense of Uncle Sam. At a hearing a few days ago it developed that Postmaster General Walter Brown, who had a new Lincoln, found that he could not ride in it with his "high-topper" on state occasions. As a result he traded off seven other used cars of the department and $1,700 in cash for a model that would accommodate his modern "two-story" hat. It also developed that wives of heads of departments were provided cars for making social calls. Secretary of State Stimson also faced the committee on the purchase of automobiles. He also had one of Uncle Sam's newest cars shipped to London, so the Secretary could ride in state while attending a conference. It will be only a few months until all cabinet positions will be filled with Democratic brethren and then we will have a chance to see how they practice economy. Even a little investigation as to how congress spends money on the government restaurant, barbershop, and a score of other things might help in the economy plans and make unnecessary a sales tax.

Already we are reading where it will be impossible for the government in the plan for reduction of costs to make cuts by merging the army and navy. Both cost about 700 millions of dollars and the war lords do not want to give up this graft at a time when the whole world demands peace. The farm politicians are fighting any reduction in the agricultural department that cost more than 300 million, but only 180 million devoted to agricultural pursuits direct. Those who have profited from the Commerce department are making a desperate effort to check retrenchment. Those on the inside admit that the budget can be balanced without a cent of new tax but politics, Republican and Democratic, will go the limit to save the jobs for the faithful.

It has developed that President Hoover was not the first presidential candidate to use the expression about grass growing in the streets. It appears the President must have reviewed the famous "Cross of Gold" speech delivered years ago by William Jennings Bryan, then a Democratic candidate in the famous 16 to 1 campaign. Bryan said: "Burn down your cities and leave our farms, and your cities will spring up again as if by magic; but destroy our farms and the grass will grow in the streets of every city in the country." President Hoover in one of his campaign speeches used a similar expression, and historians now find it originated with Bryan in the McKinley campaign.

While the weatherman set a new record or rather a new style for real winter weather before Christmas, the hog market on Tuesday set a new low, a world's record, $2.15. It is little wonder and the reason is evident that higher prices are not likely to prevail while the purchasing power of the great mass of laboring people, those that consume most of the meat, is so low. One of the largest producers of a certain popular prepared food just recently closed a nation wide survey to learn the "why" of slow sales for a product that in years past has sold well at this season of the year. The net result of the survey was that sales had declined owing to the low purchasing power of the people.

The oil and gasoline interests have appealed to Secretary of State Brown for an extension of time, 30 days, for the purchase of automobile tags in the state, but the Secretary says "No." The oil and gasoline people say the sale of tags this month means a loss not only in their business but to the sale of holiday goods. They also say other tax collection will be retarded but the Secretary points out that most all taxes are paid in January and February. He says all money paid in will be distributed about January 12 so the state and counties can give employment on roads. Last year about 12 million dollars were sent to the 83 counties. The suggestion of the oil and gasoline people is not new. Retail interests have discussed a change in the law as to time of getting new license plates. Some say June and July would be ideal months and in this way holiday business would not be affected. Again more automobile owners would have ready money during the month named. To change the date would of course cause confusion and check highway and construction work until the readjustment could be made. As the law stands owners of autos are not compelled to purchase tags in the month of December. In fact by waiting three months they save one fourth of the cost of tags, but the auto must not be taken onto the highway without new tags.

An interesting report on business conditions was given out Tuesday by Leonard P. Ayres, nationally prominent economist for one of the largest banking institutions in Cleveland. He says: "The way to recovery is not permanently blocked, but it is seriously obstructed, and is likely to remain so until the federal government removes some of the barriers with which it alone can deal. The tariff policy, the settlement of war debts, balancing of the federal budget, and the maintenance of sound money are fundamentally important that each or any of them might well prove to be controlling factors in the outcome." Such statement relative to tariff change may be a bit disturbing to some of our Republican campaign orators. Business can take care of itself now. Politicians are more interested in it as an issue than the good or bad effects it may have on business. Now when the public learns that more goods come into this country free than under tariff duty, most all the campaign speeches from the Republican standpoint, must be forgotten.

Something happened in the House of Congress Tuesday that does not happen often in any generation, the charge against President Herbert Hoover with "High Crimes and Misdemeanors" and impeachment proceedings suggested. Such was the charge of Congressman McFadden, Republican, from Pennsylvania. McFadden charged the President with violation of the constitution and laws in connection with the German moratorium, "to defeat and injure the government and the people of the United States." Back in July, 1931, McFadden, long a prominent Republican congressman gained prominence by his bitter attack against the administration for the moratorium. The Republican machine in Pennsylvania with all the federal and administration power through patronage, endeavored to defeat McFadden by the election of his Democratic opponent, but he won easily. No doubt his impeachment resolution Tuesday was more to rebuke the President for what had happened at the polls. Congress by an almost unanimous vote, not on party lines, sent the resolution to a peaceful death by "tabling it."

The Republican leaders in Washington are so much "up in the air" and divided among themselves, that one can hardly keep up with reports as to what they will or will not do in the closing days of the administration. At first there were to be no Republican nominations go before the Senate as that body was Democratic. A few days ago a rather long list was sent in by President Hoover. Tuesday the name of Postmaster Frazier went into the pot for another term. What the Democratic Senate will do, no one at this time can tell. Reports have been circulated in Democratic territory that all such confirmations would be turned down or held up until after March 4th. The Republican Senate did this very thing the last three months of the Wilson administration, preceding the inauguration of President Harding. Now the Democrats say they must give the Republicans a dose of their own medicine. Some Democratic Senators want to turn down confirmation even of Democrats who had been named by President Hoover for some of his various commissions. This hits directly at former Senator Pomerene, who is head of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

With the public mind on government expenditures, all classes of citizens are beginning to think both federal and state governments have an excess of inspection, much of which is nothing more than meddling in another fellow's business to hold a political appointment. One of our farmer friends remarked the other day that he thought the inspectors for seeds was all a farce. As it stood many new varieties of seed have been introduced, even with inspection, which only added to the cost of the seed. We have inspectors for different oils that have no use in such times as we are experiencing. Farmers are also beginning to learn that there is a surplus of dairy inspection, all of which has a relation to the price of milk and the consumer in the city is told that milk cannot be sold much cheaper due to inspection costs. A farmer cannot kill a hog and sell the meat in most cities without paying a fee for a city inspection. Then we have the plumbing inspection that is unnecessary and only a burden to the property owner. Must of these mentioned have been authorized by states and cities. The federal government has thousands of inspectors on as many unnecessary jobs. The manufacturer is troubled with inspectors from the bookkeeping department to the boiler room. We even have federal inspectors that inspect the permits issued by the government to physicians to write prescriptions for liquor. There are numerous inspections that are we think really necessary, those that relate to fire hazards and inspection of public water supply. We do not want to leave the impression that all these inspections should be discontinued but it is all overdone and if the enormous cost is not met by the individual or corporations, it must be paid by the taxpayer, and in most instances it is charged directly to the consumer.

GUM-DIPPED CORDS
The Firestone patented Gum-Dipping process transforms the cotton cords into a strong, tough, sinewy unit. Liquid rubber penetrates every cord and coats every fiber, guarding against internal friction and heat, greatly increasing the strength of the cord body, and giving longer life.

TWO EXTRA GUM-DIPPED CORD PLIES UNDER THE TREAD
This is a patented construction, and the two extra Gum-Dipped cord plies are so placed that you get 56% stronger bond between tread and cord body, and tests show 26% greater protection against punctures and blowouts. It sets a new standard for the performance on high speed cars.

NON-SKID TREAD
Tough, live rubber specially compounded for long, slow wear. Scientifically designed non-skid gives greater traction and safe, quiet performance.

W. C. T. U. NOTES

Sponsored by Cedarville W. C. T. U.

HOST OF EVILS TO FOLLOW BEER'S RETURN

Believing that the public should be warned against the alluring promises that the wets are making if the Volstead Act should be amended and beer should again be legalized, Dr. F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, lists among the harmful results that may come, the following:

An immediate increase in traffic casualties.

An immediate increase in the number of alcohol addicts, particularly among young people.

An immediate decrease in merchandise sales with loss of profits and employment in other industries.

An immediate increase in enforcement difficulties with enforcement machinery paralyzed by political influence and a convenient cover for illicit whisky sales provided by beer trade.

WOULD RETURN OF BEER HELP UNEMPLOYMENT?

Conceding that the reopening of the breweries would give some men jobs, it is safe to assert that such relief would be very small because the very nature of the brewing business requires a minimum of human labor.

Instead of the million men that the wets are claiming would be supplied with work by the opening of the beer factories there would be only a little over 60,000 in all probability, judging by the men employed in the business in other years.

But what about the other side of the question? Mr. Richard Scott, president of the Reo Motor Company, and a large employer of labor, asks in a letter addressed to August A. Busch, the big brewer, what about two other effects that would counterbalance the giving of jobs to half a million men?

Mr. Scott says, as reported by the American Business Men's Foundation, of which Mr. Scott is president:

"In a time like this, to talk of diverting $400,000,000 (Mr. Busch's estimate) or any substantial part of this amount, from the nation's market for necessities and wholesome luxuries, to the coffers of a traffic that can only exist as a parasite on all legitimate industry, is unintelligent nonsense," he wrote.

"From what source do you think the money would come to pay the wages of these men, to purchase this coal, gas, raw material, and to contribute $400,000,000 in taxes?"

"The true answer can be given in a single sentence:

"The people would have to pay for your restored beer prosperity."

"Every dollar of the wages you proffer the unemployed would have to come from the people, from the millions who would pay for the beer you would sell with money that would thereby be diverted from legitimate business necessities and refreshing luxuries."

"And the cost of them would not only be the millions they would be lured to give you directly for your beer, diverted from legitimate industries, but added to that would have to pay in the damaged health, the shattered home, the mounting inefficiency, disease, crime, poverty and degradation that have always been the inevitable effects of the beer trade and the liquor traffic, legal or illegal, whenever it has touched mankind."

"Have you asked the great railroad presidents what daily patronage of the re-opened beer bar they would recommend to their 2,000,000 engineers, train dispatchers, telegraphers, shopmen and other employees; have you consulted the captains of industry as to what part of this $400,000,000 they would like to have their 8,350,000 wage-earning employees contribute to insure your comeback, and polled America's 9,000,000 farmers, 40,000,000 mothers, 2,000,000 teachers, lawyers, public officials, physicians and others, as to what their proportion should be?"

"The ironical necessity of clear brains for owners and operators of 26,000,000 automobiles is self-evident."

Announcement

About harvest time I deviated some from my adopted CASH SYSTEM of BUSINESS and opened some Credit Accounts.

Some of these accounts were opened with special verbal agreements, and some with no agreement of any kind. Some were paid at the specified time and some were not, and some have run considerable time leaving me quite a large amount in accounts outstanding, which hinders me in carrying a Stock of Merchandise. It is impossible for me to go on giving Credit only under Special Conditions, and then for a very limited time.

In former years Thirty Days were considered CASH—But 30 days is not any more. I am very sorry to have to make this announcement but it is the only way I can see to stay in Business.

I thank all for your past Patronage, and Solicit your Present and Future trade.

Respectfully,

HIGH NECKLINE IS ALL SET FOR FALL

Outstanding Feature of New Autumn Fashions.

Necklines and neckwear are among the most important details of clothes for fall. The close, high, youthful neckline that buttons up to the throat is slated for high popularity, and it is to be relieved by new and tailored touches of white and color.

Little stand-up or turn-over collars of white organdie will be seen on tailored wool street frocks, particularly black ones.

A crisp organdie bow or a white silk plique assest will add a last-minute touch to a last year's frock. But collars and cuffs are to be tailored this fall—no fold-overs.

A white organdie blouse, for instance, is effective when worn with a black Eton suit. The blouse has a crisp little collar which stands up and ties with a tiny bow of self-material. It also has long sleeves tied with a tiny tailored bow at the wrist, and showing beneath the three-quarters sleeves of the Eton jacket.
